rather elevated after dinner. He denounced the Government, stated the Leonardo da Vinci cartoon (which has been the subject of so much comment here) should go to the highest foolish bidder, and ~~that~~ the Elgin Marbles should be returned to Greece. This touched off an artistic discussion on a ~~highly~~ heated plane. It was a delightful evening. Lady Marks is an enterprising collector of Chinese porcelains.

May 11, 1962 - Friday

This morning, I saw John A. Kennedy, Publisher of the Sioux Falls, South Dakota, ARGUS-LEADER. He is an enterprising ~~man~~ man. Having lost his bag yesterday in a flight from Copenhagen, he was attired in a ~~very~~ remarkable bookmaker's black and white checked jacket, for which he was unnecessarily apologetic. He wondered whether it would be suitable for a lunch given for him today by Roy Thomson, a old friend of his, who has been trying to buy his newspaper. I told him it was just the thing.

After the staff meeting, I went to the Garrick Club, to lunch with Drew Middleton. He ~~was~~ ^{was} at the Foreign Ministers' meeting in Athens, and ~~was~~ ^{was} full of informative gossip. We crowned our lunch by ~~drinking~~ ^{drinking} a magnum of Chateau Talbot 1955. It went well, and so did we.

Mr. R. G. Owen, of King Street Baptist Church Fellowship, of Abertillery, who had invited me to make a speech there, dropped in to see me. We plunged into the question of disarmament, without arriving at any conclusion, except that the Soviets represented a menace to world peace.

E went with me tonight to a reception from 5:30 to 7:30, of the Fulbright Commission, in Fishmongers' Hall, at which Lord Radcliffe was ^{the} a guest of honor. I introduced him in more or less these terms:
